Theme of the Seminar

Strengthening Women on Environment towards Sustainable Lifestyles

Equity and Equality of women in terms of environmental concerns are prominent at present days of the world. Many programs globally aims at sustainable development by focusing on UNO's goals for the years 2016-2017. In India, women are primary care takers of natural resources. In managing the resources, women need to raise up for a call to have sustainable lifestyles. Women to raise voice towards the policies of the Government in conservation of resources. Resources are not supplied equitably to all. Climatic conditions are affecting a lot especially the pregnant women. The health of the women are to be taken care of to avoid the future generations from the disability. Environmental factors are responsible for 23 percent of the overall global disease burden, according to the World Health Organization research. Addressing such environmental problem and the issue could save the lives of six million women a year. The ecology of health concerns the environment, society and economy in which we live, fall ill and recover or meet this life's end.

Since the Supreme Court made the environmental studies compulsory for all the undergraduate courses, how much the change in the attitudes of all the students and the teachers is seen. The teaching community in the schools and colleges to have more knowledge on the present condition of the environment and to lead the student community towards the sustainable development.

To lead a sustainable lifestyle of every person, especially women with equity and equality, the national seminar is proposed by inviting Academicians, Activists, NGO's, Research scholars and students.

Objectives:

1. To create awareness on the linkages between environment and development towards sustainability.

ABOUT THE UNIVERSITY

Mission and Vision of the University

The name Sri Padmavati Mahila Visvavidyalayam (SPMVV) is self explanatory enough to suggest that it is an exclusively Women's University, which incidentally enjoys the unique distinction of being the first of its kind in Andhra Pradesh and the second of its kind in India. Ever since its inception in 1983 with the prime objective of emancipation and empowerment of women through education, has been university offering varied and professionally oriented post-graduate and graduate courses.

About Women's Studies Centre and Department

The Women's Studies Centre with the support of the UGC was established in 1984 and has been progressing with diversified activities relating to women's development and empowerment. The underlying philosophy of the Women's Studies Centre is to generate knowledge and to transmit it through teaching, training, research, documentation extension and curriculum development thus facilitating the academic diversification for the intellectuals as well as for the activists, NGOs and the personnel working for gender empowerment. At present the Centre is in the third phase. The Department of Women's Studies was started in 1989 with PG programme in Women's Studies and also offering M.Phil, and Ph.D since 1990. The Department is also offering P.G. Programme in Economics since 2003..
